2024-2025 VOYAGES | EXPEDITIONS.COM

In 1981, Sven Lindblad chartered a floatplane in Southeast Alaska to seek out places only accessible by small ship—the first step in bringing ‘citizen explorers’ to the wildest parts of America’s final frontier. Today, Alaska still captivates with the promise of discovery, and the Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic mission here remains the same: to immerse our guests in an untouched wilderness that few others will ever experience.

Celebrating 40+ Years in Alaska

A Legacy of Wild Exploration

BY FRAN GOLDEN

Award-winning writer Fran Golden has been traveling to Alaska since the mid-1990s and recently co-wrote the book 100 Things To Do In Alaska Before You Die. Here, she recounts the legacy of Lindblad Expeditions in the wilds of the 49th state.

When Sven Lindblad learned in 1981 that the sister ship to a vessel he chartered in Baja California had an opening on its calendar, he viewed the news as a welcome opportunity to expand into a new geography. After looking at a map for wilderness that would intrigue travelers, he set his sights on Alaska. On his reconnaissance of the region, the founder of Lindblad Expeditions was amazed by what he discovered: “glaciers, whales, bears, and wilderness so vast it’s hard to get your head around.”

In Alaska, Experience Counts

From its earliest Alaska voyages, Lindblad Expeditions has avoided places where larger ships sail in favor of bays and fjords where guests can commune with wilderness.

As the cruise industry has grown here, Lindblad Expeditions—partnered with National Geographic since 2004—continues to stand out, with a fleet of four U.S.-flagged ships, each carrying only 62 or 100 guests. Although the ships embark from tourist towns like Juneau and Sitka, they set course for places where civilization is just a speck on the map. “There are so many nooks and crannies we have discovered over the years,” Lindblad says. “You build up knowledge, and it makes for an action-packed time.”

Quiet Passages and Wild Creatures

While out on expedition, seasoned naturalists may lead you across Alaska’s boggy muskeg, through lush forest, and along shorelines—often with snow-capped peaks as a backdrop. You may hear the call of an eagle as you stop to breathe deeply and take in the magnificence of Mother Nature. It’s not uncommon to spot orcas, frolicking sea otters, and large Steller sea lions.

“Where we go, you are still alone in these amazing wild places,” says Trey Byus, Lindblad Expedition’s chief expedition officer. “Guests want to be in awe—to see crashing glaciers and towering mountains, to witness bears and whales up close in their natural habitats. It’s all there, and we help to enhance these moments by going where no other cruise ships are exploring. We’re surrounded by pure wildness.”

Small Ships, Big Discoveries

Lindblad’s original Alaska ships were National Geographic Sea Bird and National Geographic Sea Lion. In 2017, Lindblad added to their fleet National Geographic Quest, followed by sister ship, National Geographic Venture. Both vessels were purpose-built to explore here, with a shallow draft for navigating secluded inlets, large expanses of glass for optimal views, and twin Zodiac boarding platforms that help guests quickly disembark for wildlife encounters.

With one expedition team member for every 10 to 12 guests, it is an intimate experience. Most have worked in Alaska for years and many live locally, providing them a wealth of insider knowledge and a deep passion for the wonders in their backyards.

“I still remember the first time I was in front of a tidewater glacier, being awed by that wall of ice in front of me,” says naturalist and expedition leader Sarah Friedlander. “No place does wilderness better than Alaska.”

Experience Authentic and Immersive Exploration

Over the course of a nearly 20-year alliance, Lindblad Expeditions and National Geographic have created meaningful travel experiences that foster a passion for the planet and its people. From the moment you join one of our Alaska expeditions, you access all the resources that stem from this shared legacy of discovery.

Take Great Photos with the Pros

NATIONAL

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

Exclusive Undersea Program

Our exclusive undersea program reveals the surprising and vivid world hidden beneath Alaska's waves. Each voyage features an undersea specialist and Remotely Operated Vehicles (ROVs) to document the marine environment, gathering footage for daily recaps in the lounge so that guests can see vast kelp forests, colorful jellies and anemones, and other unusual life forms found deep beneath the surface.

Developing Young Explorers

The exclusive National Geographic Global Explorers Program is a hands-on, interactive program that teaches kids ages 18 and under how to explore like scientists and tell the stories of Alaska's legendary wilderness. Certified field educators use the natural world as a classroom to help kids hone their observation skills and share their experiences through photographs, videos, drawings, and more. With a range of activities to choose from, such as identifying whale flukes or earning their Zodiac license, kids can pursue their own interests, whether it's marine biology, geology, or photography.

INSPIRE THEIR INNER EXPLORER

Visit expeditions.com/globalexplorers for program details.

Commitment to Conservation

Sustainability is at the heart of our mission, and you can travel with peace of mind, knowing every voyage we sail gives back to the places we explore. Together with our guests, we have contributed more than $1.2 million to the conservation of Alaska habitats and communities through the Lindblad-National Geographic Fund.

These donations support programs like the Alaska Whale Foundation (AWF), which recently used grant resources to study bubble-net feeding, a cooperative foraging behavior uncommon outside the waters of Alaska. Special experiences, like onboard discussions with researchers from AWF, give travelers a window onto the impact of their contributions.

Our Ships

The Ideal Base for Immersive Exploration

The nimble ships in the Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic fleet are designed to provide up-close experiences in the planet's wildest and most remote places. In Alaska, that means taking you to the face of towering glaciers, gliding into a secluded bay to observe a pod of whales, or landing on remote beaches to hike through old-growth forest. Our ships in Alaska have the additional advantage of being U.S.-flagged, eliminating customs stops and allowing more time to explore.

Each vessel is stocked with a fleet of Zodiacs that allow us to sail without being dependent on ports or piers, while our kayaks and paddleboards let you paddle into inlets for a closer look at sea lions or to safely observe a bear feeding in a quiet cove. When we're not out exploring, open decks and large windows keep travelers connected to extraordinary views of sapphire seas and the marine life that frequents these rich waters.

We also ensure that your time onboard is equally rewarding as your time on shore. Our team of experts—such as naturalists, cultural experts, and certified photo instructors—will be on hand, giving compelling lectures and engaging in lively conversations with our guests. Beautifully appointed cabins and common areas reflect the artistic traditions of the regions we explore, while our sustainable seafood and regional produce program gives you a taste of Alaska's wild bounty, from freshly caught salmon and Dungeness crab to just-picked berries and locally brewed craft beers.

ALL IN: Activities and excursions are always included in the voyage price.

CHEERS! Beginning in 2024 we will pick up your full bar tab (excluding super-premium brands).

Fleet of zodiacs return to National Geographic Quest anchored in narrow Owl's Pass.

Southeast Alaska: The Ultimate Classroom

Naturalist Kim Baldwin has a dual role aboard the Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic fleet: in addition to interpreting our wild surroundings for guests, she also serves as a certified field educator. Here, she explains how she transforms Southeast Alaska into the ultimate classroom for kids and teens.

My role as a certified field educator is to mentor the young people who travel with us and expose them to nature in a way that encourages them to develop observation, communication, collaboration, and problem-solving skills. Young people are naturally curious, and coming to Southeast Alaska allows that curiosity to bloom.

The region is majestic, with snow-covered mountains, temperate forests, glacier-carved fjords, and other wild areas to explore. Traveling by small ship lets us go deep into this pristine sanctuary and witness creatures at close range in their natural habitat.

We're likely to see humpback whales, sometimes engaged in cooperative feeding called bubble-netting. If we're lucky, we'll spot black or brown bears along the shore. When the tide is out, they come to the water's edge to feed—it's a rare and wonderful thing.

The ship is equipped with a remotely operated vehicle (ROV) that our young explorers can drive along the seafloor to document what is living below us. We also collect plankton, put it under the microscope, and display it on a large screen to show the micro-fiber pollution in the water. This is real science, and it makes ecology lessons more tangible for young people.

One of the other great draws here is the glaciers—these beautiful blue chunks of ice that we get to maneuver through. On board, we'll make ice cream sundae glaciers, where we use ice cream and whipped cream to show the difference in densities of the snow on top of glacial ice. It's a delicious analogy. Another activity involves allowing a chunk of glacial ice to melt and saving the water for watercolor paintings. The paintings take on a different meaning when you're using 500-year-old ice.

Ultimately, we hope these experiences will help young people make connections between conservation and the abundance of life around them, and that they take what they learned in the wild back home. A week in Southeast Alaska could be the spark that ignites a love for nature that lasts their entire lives.

A dramatic photograph of a massive glacier wall. The ice is a deep, vibrant blue, with white snow and icebergs scattered across its surface. A large iceberg is seen calving from the glacier, creating a large splash of white water in the foreground. The water is a mix of green and blue, with many smaller icebergs floating in it. The overall scene is one of raw, natural power and beauty.

Venture into this roadless labyrinth, ruled by breaching whales, soaring eagles, and lumbering grizzly bears. Visit the North Pacific Cannery Museum, a collection of cannery buildings located in a pristine wilderness surrounding that highlights British Columbia's economic, cultural, and natural development over the last century. (B,L,D)

DAYS 3-6: EXPLORING GREAT BEAR RAINFOREST & COASTAL BC

Over the next four days, we will cruise deep into the fjords and deep valleys that carve into the Coast Range looking for black and grizzly bears. We will be accompanied by a cultural interpreter who will share with you local Indigenous knowledge, culture, and practice and offer unparalleled insights. It is believed that between 10-20 percent of bears in this region are born with the recessive gene that causes white fur; fewer than 400 are estimated to exist. Almost 15 percent of the land in British Columbia is protected, with a wide range of provincial parks, national parks, and UNESCO World Heritage Sites. We will go ashore and explore several remote locations where few people venture. Discover hidden gems by Zodiac and kayak, navigating the tidal narrows that lead to the spectacular Gilttoyes Inlet and gliding into rugged valleys of Owyacumish Bay—all while constantly scanning the rocky shoreline for bears. (B,L,D)

DAY 7: CRUISING/LOWE INLET PROVINCIAL MARINE PARK

Sail alongside pods of killer whales and see foraging brown bears as we sail north through the narrow Grenville Channel, a dramatic navigational experience. Not only does the channel narrow to less than a quarter of a mile across, but a slight bend in the passage makes the waterway seem to disappear into the hills ahead and behind the ship. If conditions allow, we will drop our Zodiacs and kayaks to explore the salmon stream at Verney Falls in Lowe Inlet Provincial Marine Park on our way to Ketchikan. (B,L,D)

DAY 8: KETCHIKAN, ALASKA/SEATTLE, WASHINGTON

Return to Ketchikan and disembark the ship after breakfast. Transfer to the airport for a chartered flight to Seattle. (B)
